It was at Orienville, in the northwestern part of Cakland county, that the storm wreaked its most direful vengeance. Here the death list is the largest. The town itself is a file of splinters, crumbled bricks and is a pile of splinters crambled brocks and tangled debris. Hardly a home is left standing to mark the sper where yesterday morning stood a peaceful little village. The town is off the railroad and the only means of communication with the outside world before the storm was the telephone wire.
